on one count of theft over $10,000.

Investigators also determined the library director failed to fulfill her duties by not reconciling the library's bank account each month. Although many of the fraudulent checks were issued in May and June 2020, the library director didn't discover the problem until she was preparing financials to present to the library board in July 2020.

If the library's bank had been informed of the theft within 30 days, bank officials confirmed to investigators that the likelihood of recovering all funds would have been greater. As a result of not discovering the fraudulent activity earlier, the library was only able to recover $9,751.06 of the stolen funds.

Additionally, when the library board was informed of the fraudulent checks in July, the board instructed the director to contact the police and report the theft; however, the director did not contact the police until September 2020.

"The library board should take steps to improve oversight by insisting on monthly bank account reconciliations and separating financial responsibilities between more than one person," said Comptroller Jason Mumpower. "The board must also ensure a timely annual audit of the library's accounts is performed. I'm pleased to note that library officials have corrected or will correct these problems."
