Moving the Diversity Needle FBI's First Chief Diversity Officer Reflects on Tenure

A. Tonya Odom served as the FBI's first chief diversity officer from 2012 until last fall, when she was tapped to lead the Bureau's Office of Equal Employment Opportunity Affairs.

When A. Tonya Odom joined the FBI in 2008, the former civil rights attorney and administrative judge wanted to help lead efforts to increase diversity within the 100-year-old agency's traditionally male, largely white ranks.

Her work at the U.S. Equal Employment Opportunity Commission, which enforces federal laws against job discrimination, led to her role as chief of a special program unit in the Bureau's Office of Equal Employment Opportunity Affairs. Then in 2012—after successfully lobbying to create a new Office of Diversity and Inclusion—Odom was selected to lead it as the Bureau's first chief diversity officer.

Last October, Odom returned to the Office of Equal Employment Opportunity Affairs—this time as assistant director. Looking back on her eight years as the FBI's leading advocate for diversity and inclusion, Odom is measured but optimistic on efforts to move the diversity needle at the FBI and how Diamond Young, 40, Ivory Road Athens, was charged with Resisting Arrest.

Deputies were dispatched to Bat Creek Rd E in reference to an unwanted guest. Complaint told Loudon County 911 that there cousin Diamond Young was visiting overnight, when she became out of control running back and forth, running into walls acting as if she was on drugs. Complaint also advised she went after the owner of the house when they had to hold her down until law enforcement arrived on scene. Deputies arrived on scene and tried to detain Ms. Young at which point she became violent and ran from Deputies and began trying to fight Deputy Caleb Green.

Deputy C. Green then tried multiple times to drive stun Ms. Young with no effect. Shortly after, Deputy Chase Lane , arrived on scene and assisted Deputy Caleb Green to place Diamond Young into Custody.

Ms. Young was extremely incoherent and could not stay still, home owner advised Deputy that she must have used drugs but was unsure of what and that she was in the room with her Grandson. Grandson stated that she was fine and then all the sudden began acting violent and out of control when he went to the bathroom. Cpl. Zach Frye found a empty clear bag next to the toilet. Diversity far the Bureau still has to go.

Q. What were some of the early challenges to establishing the Office of Diversity and Inclusion?

Odom: One of the first things I did was to lobby to have diversity as a core value. Existing core values included respect, integrity, fairness, and compassion, among others. Initially, there was a little pushback, because some people thought diversity was encompassed in all the other values. Making diversity a core value elevated the office and made it relevant. Before, diversity was not thought of as mission-critical or really helping us to do better as an organization. We were able to demonstrate that diversity enhanced our ability to connect with the communities we protect and serve.

Q. The FBI has struggled to improve diversity, particularly among special agents, where 83.4% are white, 4.4% are Black, and 67% are men. The figures are slightly better for intelligence analysts and professional staff. How do you interpret that?

Odom: It is frustrating. Our workforce is not that diverse. But we've also got to think about how we measure progress. And one of our big projects is a barrier analysis that looks at the entire employee lifecycle—from recruiting to promotion—to understand where we have roadblocks. There are barriers where individuals, based on their race or gender or ethnicity, are not going through those gates at the same rate. Our recruitment of women and minorities special agents has gone up significantly, but they don't all show up at new agent training. We've got to look at where we're losing people and then see what we can do to improve that process.

"In order for us to really see that needle move, everybody's got to be involved."

A. Tonya Odom, assistant director, Office of Equal Employment Opportunity Affairs

Q. What are some other measures of progress?

Odom: We have grown significantly in a number of ways.

We're not just talking about ethnic and racial diversity, but also diversity in terms of gender, sexual orientation, ability, and other dimensions of diversity. So, we've grown with respect to how we view diversity. We have also significantly enhanced our data collection and analysis capabilities.

And, with the office's growth in scope and stature, we've helped executives and front line employees alike to understand that diversity and inclusion is everyone's responsibility. That's still a challenge for us—that sense of shared responsibility. But in order for us to really see that needle move, everybody's got to be involved. That said, we were named one of the top diversity employers in government last year for our efforts reaching out to women and minorities. More than 40% of special agent applicants since 2016 are minorities, and we've increased the number of minorities at every level in the Bureau over the same time period.

And the applicant pool for female special agents has grown since 2016 from 10% in 2016 to 37%. I'm not saying we are there and that we're doing great, because we're not, quite frankly. But there are some important, visible differences, and we are on the path to even bigger accomplishments.

'A Family Like No Other'

Q. Can you describe some of the initiatives?

Odom: The FBI now has diversity recruitment plans with recruitment goals for each of the field offices. They are based on a field office's historical recruitment and the office's area demographics. That's something I had been advocating for quite some time. We also created Diversity Agent Recruitment events held by field offices to support the hiring goals. We want to help our workforce in each part could become an obsession, for today at least. You might spend a lot of time online or in the library or talking to people who specialize in this field. By day's end, your mind could be spinning like a top. Take a walk and clear your head or you might not be able to sleep.

Aries 3/21-4/19

You may find that your instincts are right, Aries, particularly where other people are concerned. You and a friend could come up with the same words at the same time, which might be a little disconcerting for both of you. Still, this increased intuition is likely to help your understanding of those close to you more than you ever expected. Make the most of it, and remember what you learn.

Taurus 4/20-5/20

Social events and group activities could bring new interests your way that provide a rich field of knowledge for you to delve into, Taurus. Someone could recommend books on the subject. This could be very exciting, especially since a lot of new people who share this interest could come into your life. Be sure to keep track of names and phone numbers. You won't want to lose touch.

Gemini 5/21-6/20

A number of people involved in the healing professions could cross your path today, Gemini. You might hear news about recent discoveries in those fields that sparks your interest. What you learn could affect your life in a profoundly positive way, so you need to write down not only the contact information for the people you meet but also the resources they use.

Cancer 6/21-7/22

A potential new love partner could show up, Cancer, perhaps someone from a distant state or foreign country or in a field like law or education. You could have a lot of interests in common with this person. Some intriguing discussions could result. Whether you choose to pursue this attraction depends on your situation, but you can enjoy this person's company today anyway.

Leo 7/23-8/22

Family members could spring some surprising news on you today, Leo. This news may concern people you know or perhaps a family member has some interesting plans of his or her own that you weren't aware of. Although positive, this news could throw you for a loop. It should definitely cause you to alter your thinking in some way. Don't let emotion overwhelm logic right now.

Virgo 8/23-9/22

Invitations to some exciting social events in your neighborhood could come today, Virgo. You might hear from some friends who are planning to attend, so you could be enthusiastically looking forward to these events. You will enjoy getting together with your friends. Bear in mind that you could also meet new people who prove to be valuable business contacts. Make sure you look your best!

Libra 9/23-10/22

Good news involving a small, extra sum of money could come today, Libra. You might receive a check in the mail. Take a friend out to lunch. You will both have fun. Afterward, you may want to blow the rest of the money on something frivolous, but don't go that far. Think about one or more items you want and concentrate on those.

Scorpio 10/23-11/21

Bonding is today's keyword, Scorpio. Relations with close friends should be enhanced by increased communication, perhaps some fascinating conversations about new ideas and exciting world events. This new intellectual rapport could bring you closer than you were before. Romantic relationships, in particular, intensify through newly discovered mutual interests, perhaps involving foreign cultures.

Sagittarius 11/22-12/21

A lot of unfinished tasks may need doing around the home today, Sagittarius. You might decide to ignore some of the work that desperately needs to be handled in favor of a project that you think you will enjoy more. Don't stick family members with the boring stuff! If you pull together to get the worst out of the way, then you can all have fun with the more interesting tasks.

Capricorn 12/22-01/19

Some great news about a friend's good fortune could be exciting, Capricorn, and you might spend a lot of time on the phone not only congratulating that friend but also discussing it with other people. This is good for you, as you're apt to find it inspiring and use it as motivation to continue pushing ahead yourself. In fact, this news could change your life profoundly in the long run.

Aquarius 1/20-2/18

When it comes to managing money today, Aquarius, you should go with your gut, whether it involves personal finances, job-related concerns, or the funds of a group you're affiliated with. Be less concerned about logic and more with how you feel about sources of income, specific investments, or ways of planning expenses. Do some research to verify your insights and then follow them!
