Hobbs Act

brandishing a gun and threatening his victims.

If convicted for the Hobbs Act Robberies, the defendant faces up to 20 years imprisonment, a fine of up to $250,000, a term of supervised release of up to three years, any applicable forfeiture, and a $100 special assessment for each count of robbery. If convicted of the carjacking, the defendants faces up to 15 years of imprisonment, a fine of up to $250,000, three years of supervised release, and $100 special assessment. If convicted of brandishing a firearm in furtherance of a crime of violence, the defendant faces a mandatory minimum term of imprisonment of seven years up to life, which must be served consecutively to any term of imprisonment imposed for each count of brandishing a firearm. If convicted of felon in possession of a firearm, the defendant faces up to 10 years of imprisonment, a fine of up to $250,000, three years of supervised release, and $100 special assessment.

The arrangement was announced by Acting United States Attorney for the Eastern District of Tennessee Francis M. Hamilton III.

The investigation was led by the Federal Bureau of Investigation, Knoxville Division, the Knoxville Police Department, and the Knox County Sheriff's Office.

Assistant United States Attorney Alan S. Kirk will represent the United States.

This case was brought as part of Project Safe Neighborhoods (PSN), a comprehensive national strategy that creates local partnerships with law enforcement agencies to effectively enforce existing gun laws. It provides more options to prosecutors, allowing them to utilize local, state, and federal laws to ensure that criminals who commit gun crime face tough sentences. PSN gives each federal district the flexibility it needs to focus on individual challenges that a specific community faces.

Members of the public are reminded that an indictment constitutes only charges and that every person is presumed innocent until his or her guilt has been proven beyond a reasonable doubt.
